Democratic Barbecue in Harrison.

The gallant Democracy of Old Harrison announces that they will give an old-fashioned Kentucky barbecue at Cynthiana, on Wednesday the 28th inst., to which they invite the Democracy of the whole State. It will, undoubtedly, be a glorious gathering.

The Mass Meeting in Mercer.

The Democracy held a glorious meeting at Harrodsburg, in Mercer county, on the 15th inst.—Hon. John C. Breckinridge, Hon. William Preston, and Hon. James B. Clay, addressed the meeting. Our correspondent, "Democrat," gives an account of the meeting and speeches, which will be read with interest.

JAS. E. TYLER & CO.'S INSURANCE AGENCY.—

Those of our readers who are interested in the subject of insurance, will find in our advertising columns this morning the official exhibits of the following nine companies:

Lamar Fire Insurance Company, of New York.

Delaware Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Augusta, Maine.

Howell's Insurance Company, of New York.

Atlantic Fire and Marine Insurance Company.

Hartford First Insurance Company.

Northwestern Insurance Company.

The statements will show to those who take the trouble to examine them, that the above companies are safe, sound and reliable. Indeed, the fact that Messrs. Tyler & Co., who have so long been engaged in the business here, are acting for them, will be proof conclusive to all who know them, that before accepting such agencies, they took pains to satisfy themselves of the responsibility and reliability of the companies. They have during the past few years insured hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property, and incurred numerous heavy losses which have been invariably adjusted promptly and satisfactorily. Messrs. Tyler & Co. have in their hands about $50,000 in assets of the companies, which amount is constantly kept here.

Insurers cannot be too careful in inquiring into the solvency of the companies they do business with. It is only lately that the failures of the Bridgeport Insurance Co., of Bridgeport, Ct., and of the Farmer's & Mechanic's Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, were announced. In both of these companies citizens of Louisville had taken out policies, and in at least two instances where heavy losses were incurred, not a cent has ever been obtained therefrom. Such facts show that in this matter too great caution cannot be observed.

FUREL BOUDREAU.—We had the pleasure a few days since of meeting our old friend James A. Miller, Esq., of Bourbon county, who was on his way to New Orleans—this being his nineteenth annual trip for the same purpose—to fill orders for his master. Mr. Miller gave us an opportunity of tasting some of his "12-year-old Bourbon," and it certainly is unapproachable. He has been engaged in the manufacture of this article for nearly a quarter of a century, and those who procure his brand may feel every confidence that they have secured a pure article. In the last number of the Paris Citizen, we noticed the sworn statement of Mr. John Crotter, who is the superintendent of Mr. Miller's establishment, in which he says the whisky he makes for Mr. M. is pure and undiluted, and that there has never been any medicine, strychnine, or any poisonous substance whatever, used in the manufacture of the same." A good judge need only taste the article to be assured of this fact.

EXTRAORDINARY ROBERT.—The St. Louis Democrat of Saturday, says an old gentleman named McCarroll, of Louisville, Kentucky, arrived in that city on Friday, on the steamer Wm. M. Morrison, from New Orleans. He had taken a steam room and deposited in it a leather trunk, over the safety of which he had during the trip been observed to watch with some solicitude. On Thursday evening, about ten o'clock, he was started to find the trunk missing. Search was in vain made for it. It had evidently been adroitly removed, rifled of its valuable contents, and then thrown overboard. The contents were some $3000 in gold and bank, and a variety of costly family goods. The hopeless loss was evident to all.

PLAYING WATCHMAN.—Two enterprising individuals adsired arms and dignity on Saturday night, and proclaimed themselves "watchmen" to a drunken man. They informed him it was against the law to get drunk, and unless he paid five dollars to them they would commit him to jail. About that time John Lamborn, a "watchman as is a watchman," appeared on the street of action, and naturally disliking this interference with the vested rights and privileges due to officers elected—not self-appointed—he indicated his opinion of their conduct by marching them to jail. And then they fell from their "pride and pitch of place."

MOZART HALL AMUSEMENT.—It is hardly necessary to remind amusement seekers that the identical Harry Chapman and his charming wife appear at Mozart Hall to-night, in the first of a series of entertainments. They are well known here to require commendation at our hands. Since it, an excellent bill is presented, consisting of "Objects of Interest," the farce of the "Artful Dodger" and the fairy extravaganza of "Beauty and the Beast." There's fun for the people who will avail themselves of the chance. The question is not "who's in," but "who's out."

ROBBERTY—ESCAPE—ARREST.—A man who answers to the name of Wm. Tournare, is charged with robbing Anton Eust, of Third street, near the river, of $35 and three watches. He made his escape with his booty by the way of Lexington to Cincinnati. An officer from this city tracked and caught him Saturday, just as he was purchasing a ticket at a railroad office to go to New York. He was taken to the Covington jail, but was probably brought down last night on the mail boat.

NEW MUSIC.—We have received from the extensive publishing house of Messrs. Fauns & Huber, the following new pieces of music, all excellent in the highest style of the art: My Home, My Home, by C. W. Beckel; Sweet Child's Happy Laugh, a ballad, by John Graf; Fonda's Memory of Her, by Anton Shind; The Elms Waltz, by Louis Wagner; Le Peusse, a romance, by Blumenthal; When the Humid Shadows Hover, a ballad, by Prof. B. G. Whipple.

MORE FROM THE OCEAN CABLE FLEET.

INTERESTING PARTICULARS!

BOSTON, July 17.—The letters received from the telegraph fleet furnish the following particulars: The Agamemnon and Agamemnon II, the two ironclads, came from the day they left Plymouth and were driven as far north as lat. 54°, much higher than the rendezvous, thus delaying their operations several days. The Niagara, however, in all probability, had been going to the north, and the Agamemnon II, the Agamemnon, on the contrary, suffered severely. At one time the Commander of the Agamemnon informed his first officer that he had no hopes of saving the ship for more than two hours longer, so great was her straining, but the storm subsided at last, and she rode out to the gale.

A most unfortunate accident occurred on board, however, causing the breaking loose of the cable which held the ironclad to the gun deck. The cable got adrift and was pitched about the deck undoubtedly much to its damage. Two hundred tons of coal got adrift on the same deck, and caused infinite trouble. The second ironclad, however, was one of those having an arm and the other a leg broken. The two vessels and their tenders finally arrived on the ground, and on the morning of the 26th a trial was made to see if the Niagara could be got to the stocks. The weather being then sufficiently calm, the paying out had scarcely commenced when the wire snapped. A few hours' detention, another splice was made and the steamer started, the Agamemnon having the honor of escorting the Niagara and her companion for the American coast. Signals were kept up between the two vessels constantly, a message being transmitted every 15 minutes. All was going on well till about 10 o'clock, when the Niagara was struck by a shell at the stocks. The Agamemnon discovered that the circuit was broken. This was at half past 12 o'clock. A M. on the 27th.

The Niagara was immediately put about, and had nearly reached the mid ocean rendezvous. At 5 o'clock she was first seen by the Alice Monroe. It was believed on board the Niagara that the second breakage was caused by a kink in the Agamemnon's wire, caused by its disarrangement in the stocks. The Agamemnon had no such trouble. Nothing is said about the working of the new brakes. Probably there has been no occasion to put them in use. The Alice Monroe parted company with the Niagara and went to the stocks, and lost sight of her about 4 o'clock.

The Agamemnon had not then come in sight. The officers of the Niagara had hoped that her consort would arrive in season to make another trial. The Agamemnon, however, was so far gone, though calm, it is hardly probable that anything was done on the 27th. For two days subsequently, the weather was quite calm and favorable, but after that there was another succession of heavy squalls, gales, and the weather on the Banks, as experienced by the Alice Monroe, was exceeding rough.
